F-press connector for coaxial cable SK2000 FPS 2000 version plug (plug), connector type F, contact design male (male), connection type other, cable type other, impedance 75Ohm, isolated installation, digital transmission technology places very high demands on the safety of SAT BK and antenna systems. In order to protect the F connection from interference radiation, the compression plugs are absolutely necessary. These plugs offer an optimal mechanical connection to the F-socket that is immune to interference radiation. Televes compression connectors are the only compression connectors tailored to American and European standard home distribution cables. In contrast to all other F-connectors, the FPS compression sleeve encloses the cable jacket to keep water out.
